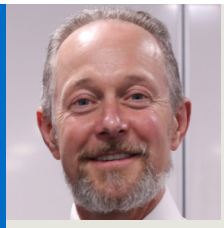
Cite is the annual theology and missions conference for the Simeon Network, the AFES network of uni staff and postgrad students. Spend the week with people like you who love Jesus and just can't quite get enough of uni. Cite begins with dinner and keynote address on Friday evening, featuring Ed Loane speaking on the history of Charles Simeon and his influence on university ministry.

Cite 2026 will be covering the doctrine of the trinity, with Ed Loane as our speaker. God revealing himself as a Trinity can be an enigma. We will not only be exploring what the Bible teaches us about our trinitarian God, but also how significant this is for the way we live.

Ed Loane

Ed is an Anglican minister who is currently serving as Warden of St Paul's College, University of Sydney. He studied at Sydney University, Moore Theological College, and Cambridge University, completing his PhD in 2014. He teaches doctrine and church history at Moore College.

Our missions component will be headlined by Sam Green. Muslims are trained to challenge Christians about the Trinity, so how do we defend this doctrine and critique the Islamic doctrine of Tawheed (the alternative to trinity)?



Samuel Green

Samuel became a Christian at university and has been involved in various Christian ministries. Since 1999 he has worked with the Australian Fellowship of Evangelical Students (AFES) as a campus evangelist and Islamic Engagement Director. Engaging with Islam is one of Samuel's main interests and he does this through writing, training, evangelism, lectures and debates.
